Review

for the Master's degree program 7M07206 "Geology and exploration of solid mineral deposits"

After reviewing the educational program submitted for review in the direction of "Geology and exploration of solid mineral deposits" compiled for the preparation of undergraduates, the reviewer came to the following conclusions:

The educational program in the direction prepared by the Department "Geological survey, search and exploration of mineral deposits" is structured and composed logically. It contains general provisions, characteristics of the direction of training, characteristics of professional activity, and the field of professional activity of the EP graduate. types of production and management and predictive training of labor activity:

- -production line;
- organizational and managerial, production activities:
- -project activities;
- organizational and managerial activities.

The content of the Master's degree program consists of::

- 1. theoretical training, including the study of cycles of basic and core disciplines;
- 2. practical training of undergraduates: various types of internships, scientific or professional internships;
- 3.research work, including the implementation of a master's thesізитоговой аттестации:
- 4. final certification;
- 5. research practice;

Generalized labor functions of graduates are developed in accordance with the professional standards of specialties and the industry framework of professions. The presented educational program is informative, has a theoretical and practical orientation, includes a sufficient number of various cycles aimed at developing students 'creative abilities, and fully meets state requirements. Based on the review, it can be concluded that the nature, structure and content of the educational program meets the requirements of the Ministry of Education and Science of the Republic of Kazakhstan and will allow its implementation to successfully ensure formation of the declared competencies.

Директор

ТОО «ИКЦ «ГЕО»

Кабазиев Б.М.

Review

for the Master's degree program 7M07219 "Geology and exploration of solid mineral deposits"

After reviewing the educational program submitted for review in the direction of "Geology and exploration of solid mineral deposits" compiled for the preparation of undergraduates, the reviewer came to the following conclusions:

The educational program in the direction prepared by the Department "Geological survey, search and exploration of mineral deposits" is structured and composed logically. It contains general provisions, characteristics of the direction of training, characteristics of professional activity, and the field of professional activity of the EP graduate. types of production and management and predictive training of labor activity:

- organizational and managerial, production activities:
- -project activities;

The content of the Master's degree program consists of::

- 1. theoretical training, including the study of cycles of basic and core disciplines;
- 2. practical training of undergraduates: various types of internships, scientific or professional internships;
- 3.research work, including the implementation of a master's thesізитоговой аттестации;
- 4. final certification;
- 5. production practice;
- 6. experimental research work of a master's student.

Generalized labor functions of graduates are developed in accordance with the professional standards of specialties and the industry framework of professions. The presented educational program is informative, has a theoretical and practical orientation, includes a sufficient number of various cycles aimed at developing students 'creative abilities, and fully meets state requirements. Based on the review, it can be concluded that the nature, structure and content of the educational program meets the requirements of the Ministry of Education and Science of the Republic of Kazakhstan and will allow its implementation to successfully ensure formation of the declared competencies.

Директор ТОО «ИКЦ «ГЕО»

Кабазиев Б.М.